Residents ask: Why are gas prices so high in the Glades?

By Brenda Bunting
Editor

Residents in Belle Glade, Pahokee, South Bay and Canal Point have been asking the question over and over the last few years, but never more than lately. Why are gas prices at the pumps in the Glades so much higher than in eastern Palm Beach County? Or Clewiston, for that matter?

Gas prices on the coast are anywhere from 10 to 15 cents a gallon lower and are also a few cents lower in Clewiston.

Local retail distributors and gas station owners give several reasons for the price variance, but the most frequently cited reason is volume.

A representative with Howell Oil in Belle Glade says gas stations on the coast sell in large volume, due to higher demand from a larger population. The Chevron dealer says it's not unusual for a gas station in West Palm Beach to sell 250,000 gallons of gas a month. Here, a station owner is lucky if he sells 25,000 gallons a month.

Carl Berner with Berner Oil in Clewiston, who also owns the BP station at Palm Beach Community College in Belle Glade, agrees volume is a large part of variance. He compares local stations to the Hess station on SR 80, going into West Palm Beach.

"It would take 10 months to do the volume the Hess station does in one month," he said.

Mr. Berner says station owners have a high financial investment in gas stations and numerous environmental regulations which add significantly to the cost of doing business. If a station has low volume, but still has to pay the bank note every month and pay for employees salaries and utilities, they must charge a higher price for gas to stay in business.

Palm Beach County residents already pay more gas taxes than many other counties, (8 cents a gallon in local taxes) and it went up an additional penny in January.

"A lot of the Mom and Pop stations are hurting," says Mr. Berner. And, they are the same ones who give back to the community in numerous ways, such as little league, participating in local organizations and supporting the local economy, he noted.

Local distributors Kirch Oil and Texaco were also contacted for this story, but they did not return our calls.

SFWMD agrees to accept $46 million from Interior Dept. to resume land acquisition

The governing board of the South Florida Water Management District has approved accepting $46 million from the federal government so the agency can continue acquiring land for a 4,900-acre filter marsh that will cleanse water flowing into the northern Everglades.

U.S. Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt and District Board Chairman Frank "Sonny" Williamson Jr. signed the two-part pact, an application for federal assistance and a grant agreement for Stormwater Treatment Area 1-East, following the board vote.

"The secret to our success in South Florida is the nature of our partnership on Everglades restoration," Babbitt said, "which have great public support, and are, in turn, reflected in the congressional delegation by its bipartisan support as well."

Williamson thanked the secretary for his perseverance in spearheading the agreements through Washington. Various federal agencies - the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Interior Department, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers - and the District also brought this particular agreement to fruition. The state's 1994 Everglades Forever Act set a July 1, 1998, deadline for the District to acquire land for STA-1E. The act mandated the STAs, large-scale wetland treatment systems, to remove nutrients from farm runoff before it flows into the Everglades. The 1996 Federal Water Resources Development Act gave responsibility for funding STA-1E to the Interior Department and its construction to the Corps.

The District began acquiring land for STA-1E - 2,562 acres for $20,055,819 - until the governing board halted further acquisitions because the agency needed the federal money in hand to continue the project.

The agreement, which was made Feb. 12, will reimburse the District for its previous acquisitions and will provide $25,944,181 to acquire the remaining 2,376 acres. The District's target is still July 1, 1998, to complete the acquisitions.

STA-1E is at the north end of the Arthur R. Marshall Loxahatchee National Wildlife Refuge, at State Road 80, just east of the S-5A pump station in central Palm Beach County.

A healthier life ...

This week The Sun adds a new feature; a weekly column on nutrition, diet and exercise.

By Katrina Elskens

As the author of "A healthier life," I don't claim to be an expert on health, nutrition or exercise. I don't have a medical degree or any specialized training in nutrition.

I do, however, have many, many years experience of trying just about every diet that has been documented. I tried the Weight Watchers diet, the Scarsdale diet, the cabbage diet, the high protein diet, the low protein diet and the grapefruit diet. I joined the Dr. Atkins Diet Revolution. I nearly went bananas on the bananas diet. I even tried over-the-counter weight loss products, which I put into two categories — the kind that you take and then they swell up in your stomach so you feel full and the kind that have so much caffeine that you wind up too nervous to know if you have eaten or not.

After many, many years of research, I discovered that all of these diet plans work — as long as you stay on them. The problem is that most people have trouble staying on them very long. And some of the diets which are not nutritionally balanced can be dangerous if you

Katrina Elskens

stay on them too long.

What does work, or at least worked for me, is a change in lifestyle. Eating right and exercising regularly leads to better health. Who would have guessed?

Statistics show that one-third of Americans are overweight to the point that it could be detrimental to their health. Their poor eating habits contribute to a wide number of health problems, including high blood pressure and heart problems.

Many American children are becoming couch potatoes who have trouble doing a few sit-ups or running a mile.

On the other side of the spectrum, some young women are so obsessed with being as thin as models that they are literally starving themselves to death.

There are no easy answers, no quick fixes, no pills we can take to become healthy and thin.

But with a little work, a little common sense, and a lot of information, we can be healthier.

After much encouragement from those involved in local health agencies, I decided to start this column to share my personal interest in nutrition topics and my love of reading. As a journalist, I can take what I learn from my own research and pass it along to you, the readers.

And, through my work at the newspaper, I have many contacts with health agencies and organizations that are more than willing to provide information.

In future columns I hope to include reviews on books about diet, nutrition and exercise; recipes for nutritionally-balanced meals; reviews of exercise tapes and programs; and general information on recent medical research.

Computer Vision Syndrome: Costly to Businesses and Employees

It's important to have a fully adjustable workstation so you can work comfortably at your computer. Optometrists also recommend taking a break every 10 minutes from intense computer work to give your eyes a rest.

(MS) — Eye-related health care and glasses for problems related to computer use cost Americans nearly $2 billion each year, according to a Caliber-based computer and vision expert.

Citing figures from the American Optometric Association (AOA), James E. Sheedy, O.D., Ph.D., Walnut Creek, Calif., notes that eye-related complaints is the "No. 1" problem cited by computer users.

"Since working at a computer is such a visually intense task, people use their bodies to align their eyes so they can best see and interact with the computer. They accommodate their eyes at the expense of good posture, which results in musculoskeletal difficulties like neckaches, shoulder pain and backaches," Dr. Sheedy says.

However, computer users can take preventive steps to minimize the effects on the eyes and body. Dr. Sheedy recommends:

- Placing the computer straight in front of you if you're

- Keeping the computer screen 4 inches to 9 inches below eye level.

- Using drapes, shades or blinds to control window lighting and glare.

- Creating an adjustable workstation, including an adjustable table and chair, an adjustable copyholder that fastens either to the desk or the computer, a screen that can be turned or tilted, and adjustable brightness and contrast controls.

- Trying a glare-reduction filter. Filters with the AOA seal of Acceptance are available at office supply stores and can enhance screen contrast and increase character legibility.

"If the eyes are suffering when working at a computer, the body also will. Your optometrist will target the problem and prescribe solutions to solve it. In most cases, it may only mean a pair of special glasses, which is a lot less expensive and painful than neck and shoulder treatments," Dr. Sheedy says.

Donate your used care to the National Kidney Foundation

If your used vehicle is weighing you down, the National Kidney Foundation of Florida can help you shed a few unwanted pounds. The Foundation's Kidney Cars Program offers a solution that may mean tax relief when you shed your unwanted vehicle.

Donate your car, boat, truck, motorcycle or motor home to the Kidney Cars Program and you will not only get rid of that extra bulk in your yard, but you may be eligible for a tax deduction. The process is simple. Call 800-488-CARS (2277) from anywhere in the state and an information packet will be sent to you along with a self-addressed envelope in which to mail back the signed titles and odometer statements. Upon receipt of the information, the National Kidney Foundation will call to arrange for a free pick-up. Vehicles are either auctioned to wholesale dealers or salvaged for parts. Donors receive an acknowledgement letter stating the year, make, and vehicle identification number of the donated vehicle for tax purposes.

Donating your vehicle to the National Kidney Foundation can help save lives. The funds raised through the Kidney Cars Program are used to support programs in research, education and patient services. The mission of the National Kidney Foundation is to prevent kidney and urinary diseases, improve the health and well-being of individuals affected by these diseases and increase the availability of all organs for transplantation.

For more information or to donate your vehicle, please call 1-800-488-CARS (2277). For tax deduction information, consult your tax advisor.

Custodians aren't to blame

"Hi. I'm calling about the school board employee's response to the condition of Glades Central. I'm not real sure about Glades Central, but my husband is a custodian.

I don't feel it's right for the school board to say that the custodians and administration need to do their job. It's not so much the custodians as it is the administration.

The custodians do their job. My husband comes home and tells me how he does this, he does that, and he goes back and the kids have just totally messed it up. They carve things into the desks. They do graffiti on the walls. They don't use the urinals in the bathroom. They'll urinate right on the floor.

When a custodian works night shift, it's kind of hard for them to control the children during the day. That's something the teachers and administration have to do. And also something the school board employees need to take control of themselves instead of blaming it on the less-employees.

Thank you."

Why close Pahokee dike at 10 p.m.?

"I'd like to hear what the Pahokee city officials have to say about closing the dike at 10 p.m. at night so city people can't go up there and drink a beer and have a good time, whatever.

What they need to do is concentrate on downtown Pahokee. It is such a pigsty down there. The people who live down there just don't care. They throw their garbage all over the place. They sell their drugs in the corner.

I would think the city officials would be a lot more concerned about that than somebody going up and sitting on the dike and having a beer.

Thanks."

Pahokee City manager Ken Schenck responds: The reason the top of the dike has been closed is because most of the people up there were being a nuisance. They were yelling at campers, shooting out lights and, as the caller stated, drinking beer, which is against the open container law. They were also making a general mess the city had to clean up each day. I agree, there are worse areas in town and day. I agree, there are worse areas in town and day.

House Speaker explains 1998 priorities

By Daniel Webster

Florida House of Representatives

Last year, many changes were made to the House of Representatives. We sought to push down the "pyramid of power" that allowed only a few individuals to control the legislative process and spread this authority among all members of the house. We established a system that prioritized legislation, so that the most important issues were taken up first. We undertook an initiative to become more accountable to the public by ending committee meetings by 6 p.m.

We also extended the amount of public notice that is required prior to conducting legislative business. With the cooperation and innovative ideas of the staff of the House of Representatives, we were able to save more than $5 million of the $50 million house budget.

Having spent last year "cleaning up our own house," we are looking forward to a successful 1998.

Personal communication, a centerpiece of marital therapy and self-help books, is only part of the story in predicting whether marriages succeed or fail, Karney said. Although the way couples treat each other is important, focusing exclusively on communication fails to take into account people's personalities, family backgrounds or what kind of challenges they face in their daily lives, he said.

"It's easy to be married if you're healthy, wealthy and well-employed," he said. "It's difficult if you're sick, unemployed or have in-laws living with you because they have nowhere else to go."

Karney said altering memories about marital bliss is much like the yearning many people have for what they think are the good old days.

"It's a similar process in reverse when people are nostalgic for the past. Dissatisfied with the present, they exaggerate how good or innocent the past was in order to justify their current feelings."

In one study involving videotaped interviews of newlyweds every six months for four years, Karney found no difference in initial happiness between those who eventually divorced and those who stayed together. "Contrary to what some people might think, people who divorce in the early years of marriage are not the ones who start out less happy," he said.

level of satisfaction in the marriage - predicts divorce, Kar-

House priorities...continued from Page 4

even part-time parents.

Wouldn't it be better to have a mission that was sharply focused on effectively educating kindergartens through twelfth grade students in reading, writing, and arithmetic skills along with the character necessary to ensure a successful transfer of that student to a higher education system or to the work force? With this approach, teachers would be unshackled and freed to fulfill their primary responsibility - teaching.

Then, each and every school could be held accountable for student performance.

Looking at the mission statements of each agency is just the beginning. The Legislature has the responsibility to appropriate tax dollars for all of state government. While our desire is to fund programs that are effective, it is presently difficult to measure and evaluate progress. During the coming months, I will continue the task of aligning agency directives so that we can provide better accountability, measure progress, and fund priority issues.

Each year, the most important piece of state legislation is the state budget. This year, Senate President Toni Jennings and I have made it our goal to pass out the budget during the first weeks of Session.

This will ensure that the members of the legislature will have adequate time to evaluate the way that tax dollars are appropriated.

It will also affirm our commitment to address the most important issues, first based on the five principles that we use to evaluate all legislation: Less Government, Lower Taxes, Personal Responsibility, Individual Freedom, and Family Empowerment.

As we look ahead to the 1998 Legislative Session, my goal is to continue improving the process. A better process will produce better legislation, and better legislation will benefit the people of Florida.

Dale Earnhardt's Winning Daytona 500 Car now on display at DAYTONA USA

After many tries, Dale Earnhardt captured one of the most exciting Daytona 500s ever in the 40th edition of the "Great American Race." To complete the experience, Earnhardt will join fans inside DAYTONA USA, the Speedway's award-winning "Ultimate" Motorsports Attraction" for a special appearance with his winning car.

Earnhardt's No. 3 GM Goodwrench Chevrolet will be positioned in Gatorade Victory Lane within the attraction, where it will remain for fans to visit until the day just prior to the 1998 Daytona 500. The car will replace Jeff Gordon's No. 24 DuPont Refinishes Chevrolet, which won the 1997 Daytona 500.

Gatorade Victory Lane is a replica of the Speedway's famous gathering place for winners. It will feature Earnhardt's battle-scarred car complete with dents and road grime acquired from 500 miles of hard racing — along with his racing gloves, helmet and steering wheel. With Victory Lane signage as a backdrop, Earnhardt's car will sit atop a bright, black-and-white checkered flag floor and provide unique photo opportunities for fans for the next year.

DAYTONA USA guests enter Gatorade Victory Lane after watching "The Daytona 500," the attraction's premier show. This ThunderRound-Sound presentation offers a 15-minute video pre-show that visitors watch from replicas of the Speedway's grandstand entry ramps.

Once guests enter the 265-seat Pepsi Theater, they become immersed in the Daytona 500 through a 14-minute feature film, shot on 70 mm and projected onto a 55x24 foot screen. The effect, which includes key appearances by top NASCAR Winston Cup Series drivers including Earnhardt himself — leaves fans feeling as if they've experienced the "Great American Race" right from the driver's seat.

Florida-Big Bass Capital of the world

By Herb Allen

Florida is on the fast track to regain its title as "Big Bass Capital of the World."

Prior to, and following World War II, anglers visited the Sunshine State in droves to catch trophy-sized largemouth bass.

From the 1920's through the late-1970's, anglers from "The Place" to connect with wallhangers weighing anywhere from eight to 14 pounds.

Because of expedited human encroachment and an angler habit of keeping trophy fish, coupled with increasing environmental and ecological woes, the average size of big bass caught statewide declined, even though the overall number of fish being caught may have remained relatively stable.

Probably nothing chronicles the recent decline, fall, and reoccurrence of sizeable fish more than the "On The Bass Beat" column, which appears monthly in Florida Sportsman Magazine.

Although this column began in 1984, it wasn't until the August, 1987, issue that a "Tournament Results" section was inaugurated in which bass clubs, ranging from small to large, recorded their monthly standing to the publication.

About two-thirds of these monthly reports include a "Big Bass" category, in addition to who won first, second and third place, etc.

From August, 1987, through July, 1997 (10 years exactly), "On The Bass Beat" reported on an estimated 3,000 tournaments, of which 1,948 recorded "big bass" catches.

During the last five months of 1987, the big bass average for 53 tournaments was 5.37 pounds. This median rose slightly the following year to 5.88 pounds in 140 events, followed by 5.85 pounds (186 tournaments) in 1989, and 5.42 pounds in 1990 for 194 episodes.

Several fisheries biologists, who also had been monitoring catches, became alarmed when, in 1991, the average size of big bass fell statewide. Bass Beat recorded a dip to 4.58 pounds in 188 tournaments that year.

Some significant management changes were adopted by Florida's Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission (GFC) in 1992 when the average fell to what is probably an all-time low of
